

Abandoning his profession of law, because of his health, Charles Scribner, in 1846, started a modest publishing business in the Chapel of the Old Brick Church, at the corner of Nassau Street and Park Row. Building surely, he laid the foundations of one of the really great publishing houses in this country —among many which this Bank is proud to serve.

A MERCHANT or manufacturer likes to feel, in dealing with his bank, that its policy of extending credit is based on accurate knowledge of conditions. No man wants to think that he is a victim either of over- or under-confidence. The large number and broad contacts with business conditions in every part of the country and abroad, its close business connection with customers and correspondent banks, enable the Bank of the Manhattan Company to gather a fund of information that is exceptional. A customer may always feel that he will meet with a liberal attitude, and one which will be to his real advantage.
